

One plus five: the bottle babies

It was a time of the year when we all needed a break from constant kitty care. The spring delivered too many homeless kittens and we were worn out. I checked my phone messages and heard "I found 3 abandoned kittens - the mother is very sick - and they are too hot - coming over" from one of our volunteers. Forty-five minutes later I had 3 orphans in my hands. After 2 days, only one special kitten remained - a tiny dark tabby with white. Rescuers know that one kitten - a few days old - doesn't have a good chance, but we put a heated, rice-filled sock next to him (his new sibling) and bottle fed and hoped for the best. Then something inexplicable and unlikely happened. We received a call that someone had found 2 litters of kittens in a dumpster in Falls Church and the younger ones were newborns. I have plenty of things to say to the person who tossed these innocent 2-day-old kittens (and 2 five week old kittens) into a dumpster, but these kitties gave us a wonderful gift and they are the furthest thing from "trash" we can imagine. We were graced with siblings for our little orphan, giving him a chance! Rescuing 5 new bottle babies seemed logical until it came to feeding them all.

I was feeding every 5 hours - one and later two at a time. There is a special bond with the feeder and bottle babies and it developed quickly. Amy, a teacher, and two students, Amber and Tessa, often came 1-2 times a week to feed and play with them. Little Everest, our original orphan, loved to climb the front of our shirts and purr when he "got somewhere", which was sometimes under our hair, sometimes in the folds of our shirts and sometimes under our armpit! Since his colors looked like snow on rock and he loved to climb - we called him Mt. Everest,

Featured pet: Skinny

"Skinny" is very affectionate and playful. He looks like an exotic with spotted pattern and very narrow face. He always want to be petted and will come up to your lap immediately and lap up attention. He loves to follow you around as you are doing things. He loves the cat tree and toys, especially the laser pointer, and is a happy, young cat. He gets along well with other cats and is also perfectly fine when left alone. Skinny is waiting for a permanent home so he can be loved by a family of his own. Skinny is a GREAT kitty! JKR

LETTERS:

Dear Castle Cats: Here's an update on my crazy girl, Zap. She was part of the Timmy, Storm and Zap trio. She has grown into quite a girl. She provides me so much joy, and can't imagine life without her. I originally adopted her for a companion for my cat-Savanna-and now the two of them get along great. They play, groom each other. I call her Lu — it fits her to a tee—is quite the tomboy, with a little bit of a drama queen act thrown in. I can't go anywhere without her under my feet, or on my lap. She makes friends with everybody that comes into my home, and loves kids. My 4 yr old nephew and Lu made quick friends-she loves to have her belly rubbed and she chats, with a dramatic flair, constantly. Her worst day is when we have no company-she's very, very, very social. She doesn't really meow-she whines with this dramatic way-like her life is just so terrible, and throws herself on your feet so you will pet her...it's so funny. So anyway, I made the right call with my Lu and I couldn't love her more. Savanna is crazy about her, too and loves to groom her. Just thought you'd be happy to see a total success story, and that your "kids" are being well cared for! Lorri S. of South Riding, VA

Good morning:

I have to tell you how much I appreciate your rescue efforts and adoption to Snow Angel - being coy!

Little Dino - a little energizer bunny.

me of Shadow! He is the smile on my face when I wake up and he's sitting there begging for wet food, when he does kitten scurries across the tile and wood floors, when he comes over to me when I'm sitting down and stands on his hind feet and puts his front paws on my leg to see what I'm doing and get attention, when he curls up next to me to sleep, every moment is joy to me in a very rocky life right now. Sandy B. of Great Falls, VA

The origin of the housecat

In the beginning, all domestic cats were likely small short-haired tabbies, thought to be descended from the African wild cat (no stripes) and the European wild cat (striped). The first known small wild cats appeared 13,000,000 years ago. Big cats (lions, tigers, leopards) took another 10,000,000 years to evolve! All cats belong to the class Mammalian, to the order Carnivora and to the family Felidae, and there are 4 to 6 genera, the number of which are debated. The big cats are assigned to the genus Panthera; the small cats to genus Felis; the lynxes, bobcats and caracals to the genus Lynx; and a couple of Asian cats float between Felis and genera of their own. The genes of cheetah (Acinonyx) has drifted furthest from the traditional cat form. The European wild cat was highly untamable, even from birth, but descendants of the African wild cat were tamable. (from the "The Cat" by Muriel Beadle) later to become "Evie". Boomer was bold and wiry. Gimmie had a fat tummy and was the hungriest and a most urgent feeder. Loudmouth had the biggest voice and he and Gimmie wailed loudly enough for neighbors to hear as I prepared their bottles. Spot had a large patch of peach color on her head and Pinkie, also gray and peach, was small but tough and held her own. All were fantastic purrers and over-the-top "people kitties". And so they grew and grew and gave us hours of love and entertainment. When they were eating on their own, they moved to Marty's house for more space and love. They are now all in wonderful, permanent homes and we hear from them regularly. Sometimes to save one, you are sent 5 more. It's the new math!

Tips for litter box success

Is your cat not going in the box? Try these tips:

- 1) Location, location, location: put the box in a quiet, out-of-the-way place that your cat will like.
- 2) Get a box large enough for your cat and if you have more than one cat, have as many boxes as you have cats. Sharing may not be easy.
- 3) Cats like most clay and clumping litters. Some of the newer types of litters can turn them off.
- 4) If they kick litter out or look "exposed", try a covered pan.
- 5) If your cat doesn't go in the box - rethink what they may not like and add an extra box with plain clay litter somewhere else.
- 6) "Attract" brand litter has an additive to help cats use the box and often works.

- 7) For more information, read "The Cat Who Cried for Help" by Dodman, available in the public library.

A special thanks to our volunteers and supporters

Special efforts : The bake sale fall 2007 at Giant Store in Burk was a big success. The people who came were generous and left donations in addition to buying items. Thanks to the Culbertsons for their time at the tables selling items and to all the volunteers who baked. We raised about $750.

Thanks to Dr. Davis Hall and Marty Summerour for hosting and initiating the "Fur Tree" at Columbia Pike and Town & Country Animal Hospitals in 2007. Clients paid for personalized ornaments with their pet's name which were hung on the decorated trees for all to see in the lobbies of the two hospitals. We distributed the funds to several charity groups who use the two hospitals. Last year we raised over $900 which was split among 4 rescue groups. We invite you to participate this year! The trees are put up in November and taken down the end of December.

We had extra repairs done by Jeff Bonnardel who painted and put up a ceiling barrier and re-carpeting of our cat trees done by Michael McCormick. We thank all our volunteers who help week in and week out to feed and clean after the kitties. We wouldn't be able to operate without them. We have the best volunteers on earth.

We received cash, food, and medicine donations throughout the year and we thank each and every one of you for thinking of the kitties and offering your support.

Cash donations are always appreciated. Make checks to "Castle Cats" and send to 4121 Elizabeth La, Fairfax, VA 22032.
